The President's Thoughts

Lou Bortolin

President - Milne Organization

With great pride and satisfaction I greet you in this, the Golden Anniversary Year of the Milne Company. Many, many dedicated people over the past fifty years have brought us to this special moment - a moment to pause and celebrate all we have accomplished together.

April 1st, 1953, Milne Construction Co. was founded by a young Scottish engineer, James C. Milne. Soon known throughout the industry as "JCM", Mr. Milne originally intended the Company to practice general commercial construction. However, JCM soon found a niche, so to speak, in the specialty construction of mausolea and columbaria. From that day to this, Milne Construction Co. has built, mausoleum by columbarium by mausoleum, enhanced by more than a few fountains, cupolas and crosses, a reputation as the premier leader in the field of design and construction of buildings of the highest quality, buildings intended to serve the final needs of society with dignity. Today, throughout the world, "Milne" is synonymous with "quality".

Five decades have brought many rewarding experiences to those fortunate enough to have had a part in the Milne History. For me personally, my association with the Company, which began at the halfway point of this half century mark, has been an amazing journey of achievement and success. I am very fortunate to have been helped along the way by many outstanding people and wise mentors. My job today is made much easier and more productive thanks to the dedication of so many members of the Milne Organization. My sincere thanks to you all – your contribution is immeasurable.

To be a part of the Milne Company is to give the best you have to give, to believe that a job worth doing is worth doing well. The concept of "Milne quality" is ingrained in all of us. The concept of saying "it's not my job", does not exist.

As we strive for on-going growth and expansion, we know that to be ever more effective and successful in our profession, we must be sensitive to the needs of our times. Our perspective must be willing to change with a changing world. Tomorrow will bring new challenges – demanding new responses. As it has over the past half century, the Milne Company will continue to meet those challenges, bringing forward innovations for the betterment of the industry and the community.

We greatly appreciate the confidence shown by our many friends, clients, and colleagues around the world – thank you for your continued support. We look forward to the next fifty years - eager to grow and improve, confident in our future, and with renewed commitment to those we serve.

To all those within the Milne Organization, thank you for your dedication, loyalty, and perseverance. It has been my very great pleasure to work with you - and to be able to celebrate together the Golden Anniversary of the Milne Company. Congratulations to us all!!

A Tradition of Quality
